nomi

Maya Reyes · The Same-Day Closer

Launch segment: top producers | Retail branch loan officer | Employed by the lender | Top 20% by units | ~26 active referral partners | Purchase business runs on realtor and builder referrals

> "Eight days for a flyer isn't a process, it's a punishment."
>
> Top producer, 14 years, 31 active partners. Stopped submitting tickets in 2024.

14%
of top producers' urgent requests arrive on time

6.5 days
median turnaround, against a partner who needs it within a day

59%
of top producers made their own unreviewed asset at their last urgent need

7 of 30
top producers submitted zero requests in six months

2.1 / 5
top producers' satisfaction with the request process, lowest of any group

JOB TO BE DONE

When a partner or prospect gives me an opening, help me prove quickly that I'm a credible, reliable professional, so the door stays open.

GOALS

- Answer "send me something" within a day, while the partner still remembers the conversation.
- Look like the professional worth sending business to, with material that looks like hers and fits the partner's listing or event.
- Never embarrass the partner or put her license and the lender's name at risk.

BEHAVIORS

- Plans ahead when she can. Planned work, ordered a week out, mostly gets through the lender's queue. "It mostly works."
- Runs her own marketing operation. All 7 zero-request top producers have a personal assistant or freelancer; at least one pays out of pocket.
- Works from her phone, between calls. Delivers by text or email, the same day the partner asks.
- Tools today: Canva, ChatGPT, the logo copied from the lender's website, and memory for the disclosures.

PAIN POINTS

The approved path can't meet the partner's clock.
Open houses, agent lunches, a builder's weekend event: unplanned requests are where the queue fails her.
"A builder calls Thursday about a Saturday event? Forget it." · Top producer, 9 yrs

The fast path carries risk she can't see.
37% of sampled LO-made assets had a violation, most often a missing NMLS ID.
"Did it go through compliance? ...No. I think we put the NMLS on it."

She pays for the workaround herself.
Her assistant, freelancer, and time come out of her own pocket, not the lender's budget.
What she'd lose without her assistant: "my weekends."

Generic looks cheap to her partners.
9 of 140 templates cover 80% of requests, and partners notice.
"...the same template everybody else has, my builders will clock it." · Top producer

MOMENT OF MISERY: "SEND ME SOMETHING"

1 · Wait for the queue
Lands after the moment has passed.
ARRIVES TOO LATE

2 · Make it herself
Canva or generic AI, often missing disclosures.
NOT COMPLIANT

3 · Send nothing
The open door quietly closes.
PARTNER GOES ELSEWHERE

WHAT SHE NEEDS TO HEAR

Answer the partner the same day, with a flyer that looks like yours and is already reviewed.

Proof: a 3 min draft · <15 min finished. Start in chat, no form. The partner tag applies co-branding and the partner's preferences.

HER OBJECTIONS

"It'll look like everyone else's." A simple style profile makes each piece hers, not the branch template.

"Will compliance actually stand behind it?" The lender's compliance team sets the rules; Nomi applies them. Every piece is reviewed against those rules and leaves an audit trail.

"I don't have time to learn a tool." She describes what she needs in chat, the way she'd text her assistant.

WHO SHE ANSWERS TO

PARTNER · RECIPIENT
Judges speed, relevance, and polish. "If the flyer has a typo or a weird rate, I'm done with that LO."

LENDER · BUYER AND VETO
The head of marketing or sales buys Nomi. Compliance and the GC can block it. Maya influences, but doesn't sign.

14% → 60%
Success for Maya: urgent partner requests answered with a reviewed asset within 1 business day.

Composite persona. Name and illustration are fictional. Built from lender discovery research, Sept 8 – Oct 2, 2026: request-queue export (n=914), shadow-asset audit (n=240), LO survey (n=94), and 9 interviews. Quotes are verbatim from two top-producer interviews and one realtor interview.

Ready when they ask.
PM Foundations final project